

Queen's Status in U.S. Visit Stumps Etiquette Sharks

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (By U. P.).—Officials here today were trying to solve a riddle in etiquette and diplomacy.

On receipt of official notice that Queen Marie of Roumania will arrive in this country next month for an extended visit, the experts have been put to work on this problem:—

"When is a queen not a queen?" If her royal highness were traveling as a queen, this government would follow the usual diplomatic etiquette recently accorded the crown prince and princess of Sweden and provide special trains, envoys and receptions.

Or, if Queen Marie were coming "incognito," as the Prince of Wales did, the government would give only informal recognition of the royal presence here.

But the Roumanian foreign minister's language, in notifying the government of the visit, was vague regarding the exact status under which the queen chooses to travel. To add to the confusion, the Roumanian legation is uncertain about its sovereign's desires.

Arbiters of etiquette here insist she is coming neither as queen nor incognito, but privately and personally, but they point out there is no precedent or rule for entertainment of royalty in any such intermediate state.

Cop Nabs Runaway Horse Charging Through Traffic

When the horse attached to the wagon owned by E. M. Brooks, 711 Ocean Ave., became frightened and dashed down the East Drive near Lincoln Avenue yesterday afternoon endangering the occupants of scores of automobiles Patrolman Martin Dowling, 42, 224-32 92d Road, Queens Village, attached to the Prospect Park station, did not hesitate.

Dowling leaped for the bridle of the frightened animal and was dragged for 150 feet before the wagon drew to a stop. His right knee was dislocated and after treatment by an ambulance surgeon from Kings County Hospital he went home. George Chandler, a mounted patrolman, similarly distinguished himself Thursday evening by stopping a runaway horse in a Coney Island crowd.

Cody-Normand Nuptials Followed a Gay Party

HOLLYWOOD, CAL., Sept. 18.—The wedding of Lew Cody, screen star, and Mabel Normand, formerly Keystone Comedy girl, at Ventura, was the result of a lark.

From a gay midnight party in Cody's home two guests, Margaret Namara, grand opera singer, and Minert Lord, New York actor, accompanied the bride and groom to Ventura as witnesses.

Cody signed the license as a divorced man. He is a French Canadian.

Daugherty Aid Linked in Trial

Harris replied it was his duty to approve expense vouchers, and that he had approved those of Smith on Daugherty's O. K.

Harris said he found no items on the bill that were not legitimate.

Earlier in the day Charles E. Stewart of the Department of Justice had testified that although he knew Jesse Smith was not on the government payroll, he assigned him an office because he understood he was doing confidential work for the attorney general.

By government vouchers Mr. Buchner showed that in April, 1921, Smith had gone to Washington from Columbus, O., for a "confidential conversation with the attorney general"; that Daugherty and Smith then had gone to Columbus together, and on April 19, 1921, they came from Columbus to New York together. Miller came to New York from Washington the same day.

Richard Merton, who is alleged to have paid $441,000 to John T. King to negotiate return to himself of $7,000,000 in property held by Alien Property Custodian Miller, was in New York at that time, previous evidence had shown.

Harris, who revealed himself as head of the accounting department, came to the stand on crutches.

Col. William Rand, counsel for Miller, repeatedly objected to the government's taking valuable time "to prove things about which there was no dispute."

Daugherty's cold was worse yesterday, and he coughed frequently during the session. It was his eighth day in court.

Later Lewis J. Bailey, chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, testified under direct examination by Buckner that he had been introduced by Daugherty to Jesse Smith, and although the latter was not on the government payroll he had been told to "do business with him."

Smith first asked him, Bailey said, for a list of all persons in his bureau, with their salaries, and asked which were Republicans and which were Democrats.

"I told him I was not interested in their politics," Bailey said.

He asserted that Smith, under authority from Daugherty, advised dropping certain members, and that these members were dropped.

Buckner tried to show that the claim of Richard Merton for the return of the American Metal Company's assets was rushed through the offices of the alien property custodian's offices in great haste by questioning Howard W. Greene, an auditor in that office.

Greene said he had received no orders to rush Merton's claim, and had spent three hours checking it. Col. Rand then tried to show the claim might have gone through in half an hour, had pressure been brought to bear.

Mexican Bandit Victim

NEWS of the murder of Jacob Rosenthal of Woodmere, L. I., by Mexican bandits sorrowed Sylvain Metzger, his brother-in-law, who is shown reading a wire. President Calles's soldiers killed ten bandits when the United States demanded action.

Hang 11 Mexicans For Brutal Murder Of Aged American soldiers came upon the body of Rosenthal, who had been killed at the first attack. He had been shot in the chest and stabbed in the stomach. The body was taken to Cuernavaca and will be sent to this city and then shipped to the United States.

The American Embassy yesterday delivered its third note on the Rosenthal case to the Mexican Foreign Office.

When the report of the kidnapping arrived at the American Embassy, Charge d'Affaires Schoenfeld, without waiting for instructions from the State Department, advised the Mexican Foreign Office.

Foreigners Aroused

Later he delivered the first formal note from the State Department, which declared that the United States expected the Mexican government to take active measures to obtain the release of the American and to insure the prompt punishment of the kidnapers.

The second formal note, which was delivered yesterday, repeated the demand for punishment, it is understood, but the embassy declined to make public its contents.

The foreign colonies are alarmed at the outrage as many foreign residents have been accustomed to spend their week-ends at Cuernavaca, only about forty miles from this city.

'Attack' on Princess Louise Only Servant's Curiosity

TOKIO, Sept. 18 (By U. P.).—The story of a would-be assassin's attempt on the lives of Princess Louise of Sweden, Sir John Tilley, British ambassador, and Albert De Bassompierre, Belgian ambassador, during a luncheon Thursday at the British embassy, was characterized as a hoax by the metropolitan police today.

According to stories cabled abroad, a knife was hurled by an intruder toward Princess Louise and the two ambassadors through an open window, striking a cigarette case over the heart of Roger Tilley, son of the British ambassador. These stories, cabled by news agencies other than the United Press, said that the cigarette case not only saved young Tilley's life but frustrated the attack on the other guests.

In a statement to the United Press the metropolitan police declared that there is no truth in this version of the incident. Following a thorough investigation, the police explained that a curious servant was watching the progress of the luncheon when young Tilley began to question him.

The servant, frightened at the approach of young Tilley, dropped a knife he was holding and fled.

Princess Louise

Tilley at first failed to recognize the servant and reported the matter to the police, who soon arrived at a true explanation of the incident.
